PRESIDENT WILL USE ARMED FORCES TO PROTECT AMERICANS IN CHINA

PROTECTION OF AMERICANS IS DIFFICULT TASK

United States Will Act Independent of Other Nations is Report

(By Universal Service)
By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—President Coolidge will use the armed forces of the United States to the limit for protection of Americans in China, it was announced at the White House today.

The vast expanse of China and the scattered American settlements make protection a difficult task, it was explained, but the President is determined to extend aid as far as is possible.

Independent Action
The President was said to be quite willing to act independently of other nations in announcing a new diplomatic policy, but considers the protection of foreigners more important and immediate at this time. The situation calls for concerted action by combined naval forces, he believes, as the forces of no one country are considered capable of meeting the emergency.

Considered Critical

Increase In Building Permits In This City Leads The Entire State

SAN LEANDRO leads all the cities in the State, it is reported, in the percentage of increase in building permits. San Leandro's gain in 1926 over that of 1925 is 57.5 per cent.

Among the fifty largest cities in the State, San Leandro is the twenty-third in building permits and it surpassed such cities as Bakersfield, Burlingame, Fresno, Huntington Park, Palo Alto and Santa Cruz.

The citizens of San Leandro are justly proud of this record and they are starting out confidently with a determination to beat it in 1927.

The above editorial appeared in the Oakland Tribune in its issue of January 17, 1927, under the caption "Proud Record."

While it is not our desire to take any of the greatly deserved glory from San Leandro it is a fact that Richmond far exceeded the proud record of San Leandro made during the year 1926.

Richmond's building record as supplied from the files of City Building Inspector A. J. Hurley tells its own story in the following tabulation:

NUMBER OF PERMITS ISSUED	1926	1925
For New Construction	602	452
For Alterations	144	95
	746	524

VALUATION	1926	1925
Of New Construction	$2,222,382.00	$1,269,851.00
Of Alterations	54,150.00	37,476.00

TOTAL	2,276,532.00	1,307,327.00
Increase in 1926 over 1925		$969,205.00
Percentage of increase	74.14

These building permits, however, do not include the amount expended for the improvements made and buildings constructed by the various manufacturing and industrial plants, which amount to $2,685,000.00, making a total cost of building operations in Richmond during 1926 $4,961,632, or in excess of 300% increase over 1925.

The municipal building ordinances do not require industrial plants to apply for building permits on un-subdivided property for industrial buildings.

Not alone does Richmond excel every other city in the San Francisco Bay Region in building permits for 1926, but it leads in increase of population as well. Richmond has increased 80% during the past six years. It has already passed in population during its twenty-five years existence, 250 cities and towns, or all but 15 in the entire state of California.

What is more important still is the value of its manufacturing products. Any concern, whether it be a manufacturing plant, bank, municipality, county or country is unusually rated from the volume of its business. The value of manufactured products of Richmond and immediately adjacent territory for 1926 was approximately five hundred million dollars; exceeding Los Angeles and all Southern California by over one hundred million dollars.

While Richmond's harbor is yet in its infancy, nevertheless it is a fact that shipping reports show that the general cargo tonnage that passed over Richmond wharves was nearly as much as the entire cargoes of Oakland, Portland and Seattle combined.

So Oakland and the entire East Bay may well feel proud of the wonderful achievements of Richmond, which is just about to become one of the three great cities on San Francisco Bay. This development will in the not far future make the municipalities bordering on San Francisco Bay one city and that the largest in the world.

"Westward the course of empire takes its way and this is the ultimate West."

NEW S. F. BAY FERRY FIGHT LOOMS

S. P. MAY USE NEW PIER OF LOCAL FERRY

Another San Francisco Marin County Line May Be Started

Another ferry line from San Francisco to the Marin shore loomed yesterday in rumors prevalent in San Francisco waterfront circles that the Southern Pacific would be given a lease to use the quarter million dollar ferry pier being built at Point San Quentin by the Richmond-San Rafael Ferry company.

A war department permit was granted to the local company some time ago to extend its present pier to the water, into the bay 3700 feet, cutting ten minutes off the running time between Richmond and Point San Quentin.

This improvement is seen as paving the way for a new service to be inaugurated by the Southern Pacific company in opposition to the Golden Gate Ferry company, which is said to have made heavy inroads on the ferry transportation between San Francisco and Marin county.

No application has as yet been made by the railroad company for a permit, but according to well founded rumors in financial and shipping circles, the Southern Pacific company and its tributary companies will be granted a lease giving them the right to use the wharf before the improvements started a few days ago will be completed.

Two fast ferries of the Monticello steamship type will be used to serve the new route, it was stated yesterday. It was stated that orders for the construction of these two ships had already been given. These ships would operate from San Francisco to the Marin shore on a thirty-five minute schedule, it was stated.

The objective of this new ferry would be to divert northbound traffic from Sausalito where it is reported the Golden Gate Ferry company is offering almost fatal competition to the Northwestern Pacific ferry lines which has diverted its main efforts from automobile transportation to that of passengers over its steam and electric lines and to freight shipments.

Expansion of the Golden Gate lines is being strongly opposed by the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific and the Richmond-San Rafael lines and the contemplated route from San Francisco to Point San Quentin is seen as a new move to prevent further expansion of the Golden Gate lines.

Should this new ferry service be installed observers state that it would doom the construction of a bridge across the Golden Gate or more properly from the shores of San Francisco to Marin county. With the installation of service by the Southern Pacific to Point San Quentin five ferries would be serving the Marin shore which is considered adequate for traffic at the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill of Hammond, Cal., have arrived in this city for a visit with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Crompton of the St. Catherine apartments and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grover.

Rev. Norris Found "Not Guilty"

DUCE LIKENED TO EX-KAISER AND NAPOLEON

Forceful Speaker Talks To Local Club at Birthday Party

Mussolini is a menace to the peace of Europe.

Believing that the state is an end in itself and the individual is merely the raw material to be used in the machinery of the state with a single great brain directing that machinery, Mussolini is much like the German Kaiser in 1914 and Napoleon of an earlier era.

Professor Frank Russell of the department of political science at the University of California thus disposed of the Dictator Imperial of Italy in a straight-from-the-shoulder talk at the second birthday party of the Richmond Business and Professional Women's club, at the Hotel Carquinez last night. Prof. Russell has recently returned from Europe.

No Hope for Italy
"Mussolini is consistent," continued Prof. Russell, who was the speaker of the evening. "His only idea in getting into the League of Nations is to get something for Italy. He frankly tells us that. His is a narrow, predatory view of man; the individual as a bit of machinery of the state, no conscience, no high ideals, no humanity, I'm speaking of Mussolini's foreign policy not his domestic policy of which I know (Continued on Page 8)

Senate Favors Arbitration In Mexican Strife

Resolution is Adopted After Long Debate By Senators

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The senate went on record unanimously today for settling the controversy between the United States and Mexico by arbitration.

The resolution sponsored by Senator Robinson of Arkansas democratic leader, which provides for the protection of American property rights in Mexico pending the final outcome of arbitration.

An amendment by Senator Norris of Nebraska insurgent leader prohibiting the use of American armed forces in Mexico without the consent of congress was not pressed when its defeat became apparent.

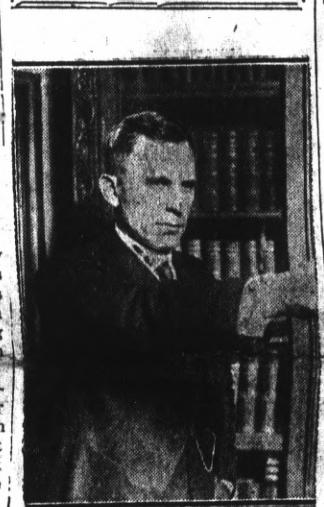

Adoption of the Robinson resolution came after five hours of debate in which both democrats and republicans sharply criticized the Mexican land and oil laws.

The Mexican government was warned by Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, a frequent spokesman for the administration that unless it acts with good faith and settles the dispute with equity and justice recognition will be withdrawn.

While the Robinson resolution is without binding effect upon President Coolidge, it expresses the sentiment of the senate for the peaceful settlement of the controversy with Mexico through arbitral agencies. It also takes a strong stand for the protection of the lives and property of Americans.

TEXAS PASTOR ACQUITTED IN MURDER TRIAL

Jury is Out for Little Longer Than One Hour To Reach Verdict

(By Universal Service)
AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 25.—The Rev. J. Frank Norris, was acquitted late today of a charge of killing D. E. Chipps, wealthy lumberman of Fort Worth. The jury was out a little more than an hour.

The Rev. Norris is one of the fundamentalist leaders of America. He pleaded self defense.

The reading of the verdict was delayed several minutes, because the Rev. Norris was absent from the court room as the jury came in.

The case of Rev. Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth, was in the hands of the jury at 4:38 o'clock this afternoon.

Final arguments in a long series of summations, were presented by Dayton Moses, chief of defense counsel and Special Prosecutor W. P. McLean.

The Rev. Norris shot Chipps in the pastor's study last July 17. Four lawyers spoke today, Judge Ike D. White of the defense and District Attorney Moore of Travis county occupied all morning.

The afternoon was given over to the addresses of Moses and McLean.

The state is demanding the electric chair for the pastor-slayer. In his argument, Judge White said, "Chippes on the day of the tragedy went to church, but he didn't go there to pray. He didn't go there to help young people lead a better life. He went there to assassinate this man, Dr. Norris, a man who does lead people to better life and who inveighs against sin." The Rev. Norris wept while Judge White pictured him as a man unwilling to take human life but who had done so only to protect his own life for his family's sake.

The trial opened Jan. 10. It was moved to Travis county from Tarrant county on a change of venue.

Mrs. J. Amussen of Alberts, Inc. is confined to her home, 641 Fifth street, with an attack of influenza.

CAMPAIGN FOR RED CROSS TO CLOSE TONIGHT

The annual Red Cross roll call being conducted here will be ended tonight and Mrs. Tsar N. Calfee, head of the local committee in charge asks that every solicitor and members of the drive committee to turn in all funds as soon as possible today so that an accurate check-up can be made on the amount collected.

The reports given yesterday were so encouraging that there is little doubt in the minds of the local committee members that the drive will be one of the most successful ever conducted here.

Reports of one hundred per cent membership for the Richmond club, Emergency Hospital, Martin's Grill, C. C. Kratzer, California Art and Tile company, Belgrade Laundry, Maternity hospital, Stege School, the Richmond Steam Laundry and the Lions club were turned in late yesterday and it is expected that more organizations and local business places and industries will be placed on the one hundred per cent list when the final check-up is made tonight.

Medico To Talk To Kiwanis Club

Dr. H. O. Breeden of Oakland will address the members of the Kiwanis club today at noon in the Hotel Carquinez, according to an announcement made last night. Dr. Breeden has a message that none should miss, Dr. George Bumgarner, chairman of the day announced.

Mrs. Violet Williams, prominent local soloist will furnish the musical numbers.

Mrs. J. E. Pfister has been ill since last Friday at her home, 748 Ninth street and is under the care of physicians. She is reported to be doing nicely.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered by mail. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this newspaper. Name you wish on your return envelope. Don't say "city."

HEALTH AND MEMORY

It takes days of unbroken sleep to get an inferiority complex. It is an extravagant luxury. That, no doubt, explains why the majority of cerebral customers who have purchased "courses" in memory training forget in a year or two what it was they received in return for the perfectly good cash they set out. I am no psychologist, but it is certainly true that we like to forget little episodes in which we ourselves have played the role of the fool. For instance, I can remember of the last memory course I fell for is he, hat, hare and although I have never forgotten these, even in the most trying situation, I must say they have never helped me to remember a friend's name, although I have no difficulty in picturing him with a hen chasing a hare around his hat. The course promised me that this little device would prove unfailing. I have met many other customers who profess they can't even recall the hare.

Dr. Arnold Lorand, in his book on "Defective Memory and Absent-Mindedness," neatly indicates the difference between normal amnesia or forgetfulness and pathological or morbid forgetfulness. Thus, he says, if one forgets and is unable to recall after reflection what the day before, that is merely a reflection on the drabness or uninteresting character of the event, but if one forgets and can't for the life of him tell what he had for dinner an hour or two ago, that is morbid, and suggests some such disease as paresis (softening of the brain) or perhaps Korsakoff's alcoholic psychosis. In other words it is normal to remember pretty much every item of the menu of a good dinner, but the better the diner or the more agreeable one is impressed by the circumstances associated with the dinner, the longer and more vividly one will remember about it.

So in meeting strangers and trying to remember their names, it is all right in principle but all wrong in practice to attempt to devise artificial or haphazard associations to help one to remember names. Unless something about the person himself is sufficiently impressive, or his engaging smile or his sympathetic bearing or his manners, it is normal to forget his name presently. But it helps memory if one takes particular note of any such natural impression a person makes.

Memory is readily affected by fatigue or disturbances in the circulation. Dr. Lorand mentions an instance of this. A patient came for ear treatment and found she had forgotten her address. She was given one drop of amyl nitrite (which tends to relax spasm of the blood vessels) and within a few minutes she was able to recall her address.

Many cases of wandering, due to amnesia (loss of memory) which unteachable reporters so insistently call "aphasia" (which means loss of speech) are due to underlying or unrecognized disturbances of the circulation. I remember one poor old fellow who was picked up by the police, who held him as a suspicious character, until finally permitted him to enter a hospital for proper treatment. He had chronic nephritis with arteriosclerosis. The police insisted that he had proved his identity, and that he was a notorious crook. The doctor sized the old man up as a decent sort and ventured to take issue with the police identification, which was based on police photographs and finger prints. After a few weeks the old man's memory returned and he was restored to his relatives. The police had to admit that they had made a mistake.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Petting and Pappy Love

I'm not so young—I'm a somewhat experienced high school teacher and have read everything you and others have suggested, but the sex problem does not seem to grow less. Many confidential talks with my students. I have always thought that caresses should be sparingly used and certainly should not be flaunted in public. It is unusual to look into our assembly hall before school and see couples sitting with arms about each other or embracing.

An extreme in feeling that boys and girls should maintain a "hands off" policy? Sometimes couples take me with them in a car. The boy often does not hesitate to take the girl in his arms; they think they are really in love and sometimes these affairs are pretty deep and genuine. But I feel responsible for the spooning, though it is not easy to "call them down" when I am out with them. (C. D.)

Answer—The affectionate couples should be expelled from the school. They are all through with school days. Your feeling that a "hands off" policy should prevail is womanly and honest and no normal person can take issue with that. But it comes to me your attitude toward the puppy love business is somewhat unsound.

Tuberculosis in Fowls
I have recently lost a number of chickens from what appears to be tuberculosis. Would eggs from this flock be safe for human consumption if boiled in the ordinary way? If not, how long must they be boiled to make them safe? (N. H. A.)

Answer—The eggs are safe, even raw. Fowl tuberculosis is not transmissible to man. Even if tubercle bacilli of the human type were in an egg ordinary soft boiling would be sufficient to kill the germs.

Calcium for Migraine
I noticed recently some allusions to the use of calcium lactate for migraine. I have such a sick headache about every two weeks, the attack always preceded by dizziness of flashing lights over the left eye and the pain being on the left side of my head. The attack lasts two days and subsides only after much vomiting. I have two boys 15 and 23 months old, and during pregnancy was practically free from sick headache, but it is now as troublesome as ever. (Mrs. G. H.)

Answer—One victim found that a dose of 20 grains of calcium lactate taken at the first warning of an impending attack ward off the more distressing symptoms and enabled him to keep at work. Calcium lactate is not at ways acceptable to the stomach. Best to take it in a glassful of

FROM ME TO YOU

Remember, folks, that once a week our column is carrying exchange letters. Last week "Tommy" raised the question: "Is a fellow made into a social jack-ass by parents who do not give him a chance to play with girls?" The week before "Class of 1927" told his story of his love for a girl named Ruth and challenged us with the statement, "A girl who is too good will tempt a fellow to cheat."

Replies to those sophisticated samples of our younger generation are coming in rapidly. Have you sent in your reply? If not, HURRY! Your letter may be the one that is published. Do not forget to sign your own name and also give a fictitious name. I usually happened to be addressed as "Sixteen," "Seventeen," etc. Here is an answer to "Fighting Sixteen."

"Dear Fighting Sixteen: I did not know there were any boys in the world like you. All in my high school are either silly and young, or prematurely old in their thoughts. I have known some nice fellows; that is, they seemed to be nice, but something usually happened to change my opinion. I wonder if it is my own fault and whether I expect too much of a boy by asking him to be a great writer some day, but I find I am losing my imagination and long for a girl who is interested in nothing but jazz and dancing."

SYNOPSIS

John was not prepared to go so far as to believe that any of the judges were corrupt. But a majority of the judges were of the other political party, the one that had for so many years been the dominant one in the State. It was obvious to John, as well as to everyone else, that this case was likely to make him the outstanding man, politically, in the state; that he could, if he secured a conviction, be nominated and elected in the next campaign for governor.

And consequently it wasn't necessary to look for corruption on the bench to feel that the judges were none too likely to favor him. Certainly, they would do nothing wrong, nothing illegal. But they were likely to interpret the law in doubtful cases; if they saw him pressing for a quick trial they would perhaps all the more readily accept the excuses offered by counsel for the defense and allow "too many postponements for the good of John's case."

But, knowing all this in advance, he discounted it. He kept his temper; he allowed nothing that happened to discourage him, and he was not maddening and unnecessary delays, to rattle him. He kept his main purpose constantly in his mind. He, too, tried as well as he could to look up the facts in the old business at Honest Pete O'Brien's. But he, like Harris's people, found witnesses scattered, memories at fault, facts astonishingly hard to sift from the chaff of gossip and rumor that had hung about the events of the June night so long ago.

More and more often, despite himself, despite his resolution, John Ballard found his thoughts going back to Viola Ruskin—no, John thought, none have carried him Jordan, indeed, seemed to have some queer hold on Phil. It was almost as if, in his presence, Phil were under an hypnotic spell, as if Jordan had established a complete mastery over him, body and soul and will.

Perhaps it was because he was thinking of her so constantly that John saw Viola repeatedly at this time. It seemed to him that he never walked about downtown without encountering her. He met her leaving her bank; half a dozen times he saw her in the street, getting in or out of her car, passing him as he waited to cross through heavy traffic. Was he mistaken—or was there a difference in the way she looked at him?

Then, one day, they came face to face in such a way that not to stop and speak would have been absurd. It was she who smiled first after their initial exchange of formal, distant bows.

"I've been wanting to see you, John," she said, simply, then, "I think we ought to have a talk."

"I wonder," he said, "I wonder if it's wise, Viola."

"It's wise in the way you mean or not," she said. She raised her head proudly. "Is there any reason why two old friends should not meet and talk, whenever and where they please?"

It considered her for a moment. "No," he said. "No. Certainly we can be alone. Viola. Will you have lunch with me—now, today?"

"Yes," she said. "I was on my way to lunch with a friend, but she will understand. She called her chauffeur; scribbled a note on one of its pages, and tore it out. 'Here, Henry,' she said. 'Take this, will you, to Mrs. Cleveland's house. Tell them to see that it reaches her at once.'"

"Where shall I have him come to pick me up?" said Viola.

"The Ventura, of course," said John, smiling again. "I think that if we are to be seen lunching together it had better be at the most conspicuous and crowded place in town, don't you?"

"Oh, certainly do," she said, and laughed. "All right, Henry—and be at the Ventura at two. Wait till I come out."

The man touched his cap, dodged, and was off to do his errand. And John and Viola walked on a block, and across the square to the Hotel Ventura, the newest and best of the city's hostleries.

"Well, John," said Viola when they were seated across a table from one another.

"Well—" he countered. "He was a little embarrassed; a little shy."

"Oh, dear!" she said. "This won't do! John—I know a good deal of what's going on."

"I suppose you do," he said, slowly. "I'm sorry, Viola. Sorry again, John, and his contentions in doubtful cases; if they saw him pressing for a quick trial they would perhaps all the more readily accept the excuses offered by counsel for the defense and allow 'too many postponements for the good of John's case.'

But, knowing all this in advance, he discounted it. He kept his temper; he allowed nothing that happened to discourage him, and he was not maddening and unnecessary delays, to rattle him. He kept his main purpose constantly in his mind. He, too, tried as well as he could to look up the facts in the old business at Honest Pete O'Brien's. But he, like Harris's people, found witnesses scattered, memories at fault, facts astonishingly hard to sift from the chaff of gossip and rumor that had hung about the events of the June night so long ago.

More and more often, despite himself, despite his resolution, John Ballard found his thoughts going back to Viola Ruskin—no, John thought, none have carried him Jordan, indeed, seemed to have some queer hold on Phil. It was almost as if, in his presence, Phil were under an hypnotic spell, as if Jordan had established a complete mastery over him, body and soul and will.

Perhaps it was because he was thinking of her so constantly that John saw Viola repeatedly at this time. It seemed to him that he never walked about downtown without encountering her. He met her leaving her bank; half a dozen times he saw her in the street, getting in or out of her car, passing him as he waited to cross through heavy traffic. Was he mistaken—or was there a difference in the way she looked at him?

VERA GORDON IS MOTHER OF IZZY AT CALIFORNIA

All who remember Vera Gordon as the Jewish mother in "Humoresque," and there are hundreds of thousands who do remember her, will rejoice that she has been chosen as the mother in George Jessel's starring vehicle, "Private Izzy Murphy," the Warner picture directed by Lloyd Bacon, which comes to the California theatre today for a two days' run.

Miss Gordon's vivid and poignant performances seem to be the incarnation of all the joys and sorrows of mothers everywhere. She seems actually to be the mother she portrays. In "Private Izzy Murphy" she is Izzy's mother, and we see her first when, with her husband, she comes to the home her good son has prepared for her in the New World. Izzy has been successful in his delicatessen venture. He has taken the name of "Murphy" on account of the nationality of his customers. And a daughter of Erin, it is Miss Gordon, played by Patsy Ruth Miller, who captured the susceptible heart of Izzy.

Miss Gordon's role runs the whole scale of emotion—delight at her boy's business success; pride in his fine youth and strength; grief when he must go with the "fighting 69th" overseas; agony when the word comes that he has been killed in action; wild, uncontrollable delight when, in the pink of condition, he comes footling it up Fifth Avenue, under the arches and flags, when the war is over, and a mad mingling of many emotions when he marries. But Vera Gordon must be seen to be appreciated and when once seen as a "mother" she is never forgotten.

Other film features include: which the actual scenes of one of "A-I Society," an Imperial comedy; Fox's "Varieties," International News; and Larry Canelo at the organ.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 25.—Another cache of securities hidden by George F. Attorneys for Mrs. Sarah Scollard, aged Chicago millionairess who accuses her husband of grand larceny in attempting to steal a large share of her fortune, said the bonds were definitely identified as Scollard property.

Industries Place In Time of War Told To Lions

In case of war every industry in the United States must be prepared. This was the statement made by Major J. A. Dort, on the United States Army when he spoke before the members of the Lions' club yesterday afternoon.

How the nation may arrange its industrial equipment so that war will not cause such a tremendous upheaval as the last one did was explained by Dort. He stated that a survey of national productive industries is being carried on by the War Department so that industrial preparedness may be carried on. Following the address numerous questions were put to the officer by members of the club.

A quartet consisting of H. H. Mylander, Archie Winchelo, Dennis Shaw and Charles Donnelly furnished the music for the day. Mrs. D. J. Shaw accompanied on the piano.

Assemblyman Robert P. Easley was among the guests of the day and he was called upon by President B. X. Tucker to give a short talk.

Dr. L. W. Hewitt was chairman of the day.

MILTON SILLS IS STARRED IN MEN OF STEEL

Milton Sills has discovered that it takes more than physical strength and the proper shovel to put dynamite into an open hearth furnace in a steel mill.

In fact, Sills furnished considerable amusement for a half hundred steel workers at one of the mills of the United States Steel Corporation in Birmingham when he grabbed a shovel and missed the door to the furnace entirely on his first try.

"Sills ain't got the sleight," remarked an old time open hearth worker as he stood by.

"Guess you're right," replied Sills with a broad grin that completely captivated the workman and added another to the great multitude of Sills' admirers.

But after a little instruction and practice Sills was shoveling dynamite into the furnace with the best of them.

It all happened during the filming of scenes in "Men of Steel," First National's special which comes today to the Richmond theatre here. The picture was screened in the iron mines and mills of the various companies of the United States Steel Corporation. George Archainbaud directed. In the cast are: Boris Kenyon, Miss Allison, George Fawcett, Victor McLaglen, John Kolb, Edward Lawrence and others.

Other film features include: "Here Comes Charlie," a Lloyd Hamilton comedy; "Prizma," the screen magazine; and a Grantland Rice "Spotlight."

Officials of the county are investigating the mysterious burning of an automobile in the creek bed at Rocky Point on the Tunnel road early yesterday morning.

Two youths said to have been riding in the automobile left the car as it plunged over the bank and took flight without giving their names or attempting to extinguish the flames which enveloped the car as it hit the creek bed.

The car was removed to the Lafayette garage upon the order of Traffic Officer E. P. Keefe of Lafayette, who is investigating the circumstances surrounding the accident and is attempting to discover the owners of the car.

As considering the situation critical. The allied forces at Shanghai and on the Yangtze River, which are under Admiral C. S. Williams, U. S. N., ranking naval officer, are believed to be able to protect Americans and other foreigners who have gathered at Shanghai and the river ports, it was stated. But it was pointed out that many Americans are at isolated interior points, which can not be reached by the allied forces and are at the mercy of the Chinese.

At the same time the house foreign affairs committee adopted the Porter resolution and reported it favorably to the house, urging that the United States pursue an independent course in China. This resolution has to do with the American policy on unequal treaties and extra territoriality.

The President is quite willing to do this, his spokesmen indicated, but considers that it has nothing to do with the more pressing and immediate matter of protecting American lives, nor can it interfere with this.

It was declared at the White House that within the next two days, probably tomorrow, the state department will make public a memorandum of the American policy in China. This will be in response to a memorandum from the British a month ago, in which that nation urged the United States to give China a large measure of autonomy.

It was clearly indicated at the White House that the United States feels that it already has acted more liberally than any of the other nations in this respect and will go even further in this direction than the British.

Different Interests
It was pointed out that the British and the United States have entirely different interests in China. The British own large concessions there which are considered British territory, while the United States own none and really interferes less in Chinese affairs than any other nation with interests there, it was stated.

In view of this, it was intimated that the United States will make every possible concession to Chinese independence. It is hoped by the administration that the formal declaration of American policy may materially calm the increased Chinese and lessen the imminent danger to American lives.

It was emphasized, however, that beyond issuing a declaration of policy, the United States must confine itself to the immediate task of protecting American lives. There is no central government in China with which the United States can deal in the matter of negotiating treaties.

The Peking government, recognized by the United States, does not exist, except in the province of Chihli, where Peking is located.

New Treaties Asked
President Coolidge was called upon to make new treaties with China, regardless of the attitude taken by other powers toward that nation in resolutions approved by the house foreign affairs committee today.

This action was said to be aimed at heading off further outbreaks against what the Chinese describe as "foreign interference." Passage of the resolutions at this time should increase Chinese good will toward the United States, it was declared.

Fifteen committee members voted for the resolutions. None actively opposed them. Reps. McReynolds, Democrat of Tennessee, Valle, Republican of Colorado, and Hull, Republican of Illinois, voted present.

After expressing America's traditional purpose to act fairly toward China, the resolutions request President Coolidge to make new treaties with that nation and to replace present agreements calling for extra-territoriality rights and a control by this country over the Chinese tariff.

The main purpose of the resolutions was declared to be for the United States to break away from concerted action with other powers in dealing with China.

Three Fined On Liquor Charges

Three heavy fines were imposed yesterday at Martinez by Justice of the Peace Frank Glass on alleged bootleggers arrested in this city on Saturday by county officers. Mrs. A. Verrillo, 48, El Cerrito was arrested for illegal possession of liquor and was fined $400. Joe Ginzella and Pete Ricci were each fined $500.

Grave Danger to Western World Is Seen In Europe In Entente Of Russia, Japan, And China

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
(By Universal Service)
BERLIN, Jan. 25.—Russia, Japan, China—close on to 600,000,000 people. Is that the great Asiatic triple entente of the future, that the Western world, notably America, finds itself confronted with?

KARL H. VON WIEGAND

That is the question about which there is much thought and concern in more than one European chancellery as a result of the developments in China according to reports in diplomatic circles. Information reaching Berlin is to the effect that powerful forces in each of those countries are working towards that goal geographically and in interests which are quite logical and natural.

Dispatches from Riga to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, semi-official organ of the German foreign office, emphasize the news from Moscow that Japan and Russia are coming daily closer together on a joint or cooperative policy in China.

The paper says that recently on the occasion of the observance of the third anniversary of the death of Lenin, speeches made in Moscow stressed that British power in China is badly shaken and that Japan now realizes that

Operation of "Speakeasies" by Dry Agents to Entrap Citizens Into Violating Dry Law Rapped

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Four cases in which "undercover" prohibition agents deliberately conspired to "entrap" citizens into violating the dry law by illegal methods were revealed in a report submitted to the senate by the prohibition unit today.

The report was submitted in response to the Reed resolution demanding a full account of the activities of undercover agents.

In a letter accompanying it, however, both Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, "dry czar" and Commissioner of Internal Revenue, D. H. Blair, vigorously denied that the department approves the policy of having government agents conduct "speakeasies" or engage in bootlegging to ensnare unwary citizens. The letter said:

"As evidenced by this report, it is the definite policy of the Treasury Department to forbid its representatives to engage in any activities deliberately intended to entrap any citizen.

"Instructions have been repeatedly given governing the conduct of the prohibition personnel requiring that in all law enforcement work the agents shall conduct themselves in such a manner as to win the respect of the public and particularly to avoid any illegal methods to catch a law violator."

The four cases in which agents "violated the policy of the department" by themselves engaging in law violation were:

1. The "bridge whist," conducted by prohibition investigators in New York City.

2. The operation of a poolroom in Norfolk, (Va.) where liquor was sold, by two prohibition agents.

3. The smuggling of liquor across the Canadian border by prohibition agents under authority of Prohibition Administrator R. Q. Merrick.

4. The alleged operation of a saloon in Peoria, (Ill.) some years ago by prohibition agent "Lone Wolf" Asher, since deceased. The report said there was no record of Asher's alleged illegal activities in the department.

The Bridge Whist club was established by the chief prohibition investigator "without our knowledge to get evidence on large bootlegging rings," Andrews said.

The report contained a statement by Merrick in which he defended the Canadian border smuggling by prohibition agents by saying that it resulted in the conviction of several offenders and the imposition of $50,000 in fines. He said:

"The conviction of these wholesale liquor dealers did more to prevent smuggling from Canada than anything we had been able to do since the prohibition law was passed."

A warning against "entrapment" citizens and against the unnecessary destruction of property during raids was issued by Gen. Andrews to all agents in August, 1926, the report disclosed.

"Cases brought to my attention indicate woeful lack of a sense of decency on the part of agents con-opposition to Soviet Russia in China does not strengthen Japanese influence there.

The Soviet Press emphasizes the importance of the speeches of Japanese Premier Wakatsuki and Foreign Minister Shidehara in parliament and deduce therefrom that Japan is disposed to discuss the China question with the Canton government and with Moscow.

The official Soviet news agency is circulating a Tokio dispatch stating that the Japanese general staff has decided to give up working with Marshal Chang Tso Lin and draw nearer to the Kuomintang party. Soviet agents in the Orient are alleged to have been instructed to stress the friendly relations between Russia and Japan.

A dispatch from Tokio to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung states that the Japanese government has decided not to send any land military forces to China unless unforeseen events make it imperative.

A dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung declares that Japan rejected the British proposal for joint defensive measures at Shanghai and that the Japanese Foreign minister stated he does not see the urgency of military action.

Japanese political circles are said to have been surprised at British sending troops, which it is held in Tokio promises no practical success and will only serve to intensify the anti-British sentiment.

earned," the order stated. "They describe such conduct as making the prohibition law and its administration unpopular and the object of public criticism.

"I recognize the difficulty of giving authority to untrained men and how easily they abuse it, but believe that your standards can be inculcated and bring about a spirit which will make the execution of officials efficient without being obnoxious."

The report disclosed the methods by which prohibition administrators or agents may "contract" with an individual, such as a building inspector, to give evidence concerning law violations.

Authority to draw up a formal contract with such agents was given in April, 1926, by Gen. Andrews. In a "confidential" letter dated January 1, 1927, agents were advised that no money would be paid for the hire of "informers" unless the voucher was accompanied by a copy of the order from the commissioner of internal revenue authorizing the employment of the informer and a copy of a contract itself.

The report also disclosed that a man named Jud Barnes, in 1925, offered to "put out of business every importer of liquor on the Atlantic coast with no cost to the government" if granted immunity by the department for his own smuggling activities. Barnes offer was rejected by Gen. Andrews.

Bergthold Final Rites Are Held

The remains of John Bergthold, who passed away at his home, 115 South Thirty-seventh street, on Saturday after a short illness, were laid at rest on the Sunset View cemetery yesterday afternoon, following a Christian Science service at the Wilson and Kratzer chapel at 2 o'clock.

Deceased was 58 years of age and had lived in Richmond for 15 years. He leaves his widow and seven brothers and sisters.

Loot Taken From Annex Homes Found

With the arrest of Roscoe C. Eades in Martinez on Sunday and the confession on the part of Eades and his two companions, John B. Watson and Everett McGinnis, practically all of the loot taken from Richmond annex homes in January was recovered according to the local police department.

Identification of the articles was made yesterday, it was announced.

The homes said to have been robbed by the gang were occupied by T. F. McGee, 441 Fresno street and C. C. Archibald, Panhandle boulevard and Columbia avenue.

OREGON COACH FAVORS SHIFT

(By Universal Service)
OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CANVALLIS, Jan. 24.—Coach Paul J. Schlusser of the Oregon Aggies is expected back next week from the middle west and New York. While in New York he attended the national football coaches meeting.

Coach Schlusser believes the five yard penalty on the incomplete forward pass will be discontinued. Elimination of the shift will bring football back to the 1920 stage when everyone had to be set in a certain position. Doing away with the shift will probably result in many teams using the Warner system of double wing back, in the opinion of Coach Schlusser.

A football game between Carnegie Tech. and the Oregon Aggies to be played in Portland, November 26, was arranged while Coach Schlusser was in the east.

Demented Hermit Terrorizes Island

(By Universal Service)
SEATTLE, Jan. 25.—Vashon Island, across the bay from Seattle, was being terrorized this afternoon by an aged hermit who ran amuck and was apparently demented. Frantic telephone calls from frightened island residents appealed for aid from the sheriff's office here. Posses of Islanders are beating the brush and scaling almost inaccessible cliffs in search for the bearded recluse, who secreted himself after terrorizing the families of several Seattle commuters. Leaving his cliff hut the crazed nature man raged about the island several hours, sniping at Islanders with a rifle and terrorizing families with demonic screams while he executed a weird dance a la nature.

Save Bodies Not Souls Declares Judge Lindsey

(By Universal Service)
DENVER, Colo., Jan. 25.—Heat-diedly criticized by clergy and others for his pronounced views on "companionate marriages" and advocacy of birth control, juvenile Judge Ben B. Lindsey stood firm tonight on his sensational proposal of a "Temple of Venus" in every city of the land. Judge Lindsey declared that some steps should be taken to meet a menacing moral situation existing throughout the country which includes degradation and contempt for marriage as an institution and which is resulting from a condition that is tantamount to free love and trial marriages.

"Each city and state," Lindsey said, "should maintain a temple of Venus with erotologists in charge to instruct the coming childhood in the duties of the coming parenthood. These temples should be established along with the building of public schools wherein children may be taught the truths of life and the responsibilities that come with parenthood."

Floods Continue In Middle West

(By Universal Service)
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 25.—Rivers throughout the state continued to rise today. Heavy rains that fell with slight interruption during the past several days have forced the streams to dangerous levels. The downpour continued tonight.

The river is expected to break the levee at Jacksonport and Rock Island railroad has rushed equipment there to take care of refugees.

White River at Newport has risen six feet since Monday morning. It was reported, but danger is slight there as the city is protected by a concrete wall.

Ferries throughout the district are refusing to carry passengers. The water is expected to be over the Missouri Pacific main line tracks by tomorrow morning.

The rain is general throughout the middle southern states.

Confessions Secured By Force Admitted In Murder Trial

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Despite the fact that they told how their confessions were obtained from them by cruel methods, these phyllophagians were read to the jury today. In the trial of nine youths on trial for the murder of Stanley Ciesla. The oldest of the boys is 19.

The state won an important point yesterday when Judge John J. Sullivan ruled that the confessions would be admitted as evidence to the jury.

The defense has attempted to keep them out by having the youths describe inquisition methods used by the authorities to obtain the confessions.

Ciesla was killed during a street brawl last Halloween night, after he had been attacked, the state contends, by the youths, who sought to rob him of $40.

Father Files Suit To Prevent Taking Child From State

Declaring that he was being unlawfully deprived of the custody of his child, Louis B. Mealey of this city filed suit in the superior court at Martinez yesterday against his wife, Mrs. Christina Heatley and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kelly of Alameda asking that a restraining order preventing them from removing the child from the state be granted.

Heatley alleges that his wife abandoned him on January 9 and took the child to Alameda. He further alleges that he went there to get the child and Kelly prevented him from seeing the baby. Heatley declared that he believes the mother is intending to take the child to Ireland where her mother lives.

Hall Sanders and W. T. Kearney are attorneys for Heatley.

There is no hope for the future of Italy or for that part of Europe swayed by Mussolini's power so long as he maintains such an international viewpoint. "And the danger zone lies in the Balkans where Mussolini's power is strong. The only hope for peace in the Balkans is the strengthening of the hand of the League of Nations."

Prof. Russell then presented the United States in its relationship to foreign nations.

Forced Into Wars

"America in 150 years has only been forced into actual warfare with European nations," he said, "and both times it was in defense of neutrality—once in 1812 and again in the late world war."

That America's foreign policy has been largely based on its physical geography which has kept it out of foreign alliances was another thought flung out by Russell.

"Separated by 3,000 miles of water from the European nations it was but natural that this country should be kept out of foreign entanglements. The United States has not been forced into alliances because of its very isolation."

The Monroe doctrine, declared Prof. Russell, is purely American, and while presumably is recognized as a mighty force in international affairs is much over emphasized, he said.

"The United States became a recognized world power in 1898 when it freed Cuba and reached out into the far Pacific and assumed a protectorate over the Philippine Islands," he continued.

Praises Roosevelt

Prof. Russell paid high tribute to the dynamic personality of the late President Roosevelt and the forceful manner in which he forced American ideas into foreign controversies. He cited the way in which Roosevelt handled the Morocco question in 1908, forcing the Kaiser's hand and keeping peace in Morocco and keeping the open-door policy in that country on the Mediterranean. The Korean annexation by Japan was cited as another instance of the strong Roosevelt policy.

"At the same time," continued Prof. Russell, "Roosevelt reached an agreement with Japan that the latter would not cast a covetous eye toward the Philippines, an agreement that has been scrupulously observed."

War of 1914

"In 1914 we tried to head off the world war," continued Russell. "Wilson sent House to Europe. But our efforts were vain. When we did enter the war we entered as neutral and as an associate and not an ally."

Severs Minority Vote

Professor Russell decried the manner in which the United States senate broke treaty agreements by a minority vote.

He said that the president has to go outside his party to get his two-thirds vote in the senate necessary to make effective any treaty with a foreign nation.

"Thirty-five senators can block the United States in taking stand on any treaty," he said. "This is all wrong. The Republican party in its platforms in 1912, 1916, 1920 and 1923 contained a clause favoring an international court of justice and Harding was elected by a popular majority of 7,000,000 votes and yet the United States senate kept this country out of the League of Nations through a minority vote and against the popular vote of 7,000,000 majority."
